MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE IN SAXON TIMES,-The origin of the question in our matrimonial service. " Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" may be traced, according to the Rock, to Sexon times, for every Saxon buty had "mundborn" or guardian, without whose casent she could not be murried. The Saxone enarded instrumony us a holy estato; death alone could part the married. A layman who was a wichwer, or a widow, might marry again. but the Church, though it did not prevent such marriages, only tolorated them, and at the cere. many the blossing was withheld. The " waken" so well belown in Ireland were once once a religious rite amongst the Sazque in England. The Emperor of Austria has sent to Mexico, through Baron Rothschild, some valuable services of plate for the principal friends and defenders of the lote Emperor Muximilian. An interesting souvenir has also been forwarded to lutte. It consists of a photograph taken from s picture painted by the Empires a order, and representing the defortunate Maximilian, with on a sinking ship. Underneath are the dates of

But lovers now have ceased to yow; no way they ruw contrive to poison, hang or drown themselves—because I'm thirty five. Once, if the night was e'er so bright. I ne'er abroad could roam, without—" the bliss, the honour, miss, of seeing you you safe home." But now I go, through rain and enow-fatigued and scarce alive through all the dark, without a murk because I'm thirty-five.

Rev. Sydney Smith owed his first valeable piece i preferment to the persistance of Lady Holand Ersking was a constant visitor at Holland House. As soon as he was made Lord Chancellor, Lady Holland haid close siege to him to compel him to confer a living on Smith. Erskine at last yielded, and Smith called on him to thank him for the appointment. The hancellor disayowed all claim to being thanked. "Lady Holland," he said, "insisted on my, giving it to you; and if she had desired me to give it to the devil," he added, "he must have have but it!" There was something of the same spirit in the remark of George III. when he nominated a man he distinct to a hishopric. The person thus preferred coyly confessed bimself unwarthy of the preferment. To this the king replied that he knew that well enough, but the Prime Minister would have it so, and he (the king) had yielded to the permetency. This mack modest prelate may have been the hishop of whom Smith said that he looked so like Judas
